

Wesleyan's Student and Alumni Understanding Money Class

Financial literacy for all. For free.

We all need to learn to manage our money, but we don't get taught how to do it. Understanding Money, our financial wellness class, fixes that!

Topics we'll cover

- 6 ways to get out/stay out of debt and build savings
- 4 simple investments for a better money future
- 401(k)s and IRAs
- Make a plan and stay on track with free, private Zoom coaching

October 14 and 21, 2026
6:00-7:30 p.m. Eastern Time—Zoom or in person
Free dinners if attending in person!
Scan this QR code to register

Just two 90-minute Zoom sessions

Super easy to understand

Completely free

Meet Bruce Miller Understanding Money founder and teacher

Bruce started his working life like many folks: with student debt and very little money. Over time, he learned to follow some simple money principles that enabled him to get out of debt, save and invest, and after a career in marketing and advertising, retire in his 50s.

Bruce has dedicated his retirement years to making financial literacy accessible to all. He developed Understanding Money to foster that mission and has empowered thousands of people to make their way to financial freedom. He does the class pro bono and has no connection with any financial company. Bruce graduated from Dartmouth (AB in Economics, summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa) and Stanford Graduate School of Business (MBA, with top 10% honors).

Student communities include:

